

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

The objectives of the research entitled Yankee's Visions in Arthur's Court in the novel A Connecticut Yankee in Arthur's Court are: (1) to describe Yankee's perception in Arthur's court, (2) to analyze Yankee's visions in Arthur's court, (3) to analyze the effects of the visions. The data corpus is all the words, phrases, clauses, and discourses that refer to the Yankee's visions, the main character of the novel.

Hank Morgan, the American man arrives in England the sixth century. He has an unordinary journey in Arthur's court. He likes the beautiful scenery in Arthur's court. However, he hates the social and the religious conditions. He sees a lot of problems from the wrong systems.

As the modern man, Hank Morgan wants to solve the problems by his modern ideas. Firstly, he sets up people's freedom. Secondly, he sets up modern technology such as soap, tooth brush, matches, and many other things. Thirdly, he sets up modern economy.

In the middle of his efforts to modernize the nation, he forgets his good visions toward the people around him. He becomes an authoritarian person. He likes to use the other people as instruments. He also likes using his authority excessively. Hank feels over confident to control the nation. In the end of efforts, he makes a total destruction toward himself and everything in Arthur's court.
