

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

Literature is a written form which expresses thought, feeling and attitude. This means that literature is a means to express imagination in which people may get knowledge and entertainment. There are three kinds of literature. They are plays, poetry, and prose. Prose is divided into two kinds. They are short story and novel. The novel entitled Pride and Prejudice written by Jane Austen is chosen to be analyzed. This novel shows a lot of message about woman ambitions, the efforts to reach the ambitions and the effects of the woman ambitions to the characters themselves or other characters at the story.

There are three problems in this research. The first problem is the woman ambitions happen in Pride and prejudice. This problem is analyzed using the theory of Woman, ambition, and woman ambition. The woman ambitions happen in the characters Mrs. Bennet and Lydia Bennet. In this novel, Mrs. Bennet has an ambition in order that Jane Bennet, Elizabeth Bennet, and Lydia Bennet marry to noble and rich men. In addition, Lydia Bennet has ambitions on a military and charming man. The second problem is about the efforts to reach the woman ambitions. Mrs. Bennet has efforts on Jane Bennet, Elizabeth Bennet, and Lydia Bennet to marry noble and rich men. She has efforts in order that Jane Bennet gets closer and marries to Mr. Bingley. She also wants Elizabeth Bennet to marry Mr. Collins. Besides, she has efforts in order that Lydia Bennet marries to Mr. Wickham. This problem is analyzed using former theories. They are woman, ambition and woman ambition. The third problem is the effects of Mrs. Bennet's and Lydia Bennet's ambition toward themselves and other characters. Mrs. Bennet's ambition has effect on herself and other characters. They are Jane Bennet, Elizabeth Bennet, and Lydia Bennet. There are bad and good effects are suffered by themselves and other characters. In addition, the effects also happen to Lydia's ambition. She also gets effects in her ambition both to herself and other characters. This problem is analyzed using the theory of character and characterization.

Finally, the writer learns that ambition is not always a bad thing. There will be a good effect if the ambition is done by hard effort without making other people hurt. Furthermore, the ambition can become a solution in life.
