

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

After the writer analyzes the poems entitle "A Red, Red Rose" by Robert Burns and "Meeting At Night" by Robert Browning, the writer finds many thing to discuss.

First, the writer finds that the speaker in making both poems uses the symbols to describe "Love". For example in "A Red, Red Rose" Burn's uses symbol such as red, as the symbol of strong desire, never give up, very enthusiastic to love someone. Next the writer finds the word rose, that represents beauty, elegance and aromatic. The next symbol used by Burn's is melodie. Melody brings happiness in our heart and is able to make listener peaceful, quiet, and calm. In Burn's poem the writer finds a word art, which means something beautiful and artistic. In the other hand in poem "Meeting At Night" the writer finds a word sea. In poetry it symbolizes dream or expectation. The word land, means continent. Next the writer finds a word moon. This word symbolizes beauty and wonderful thing. In Browning's poem the writer finds a word waves, that means strong power.

The writer also finds that both poems have differences in using symbol of "Love". In "A Red, Red Rose" this poem uses many object as symbol. For example rose flower, melodie, art and rocks. The meaning of rocks here is coral stone. In "Meeting At Night" this poem uses many natural symbol, those are expressed in word, sea, land, moon, waves, and beach.

Both poems have the similarities. Those poems express the same concepts namely love. The speaker's personality is so strong especially in love, because describing love will never be out of date. Love is the most important thing in the world. In poem "A Red, Red Rose" the love experience is expressed clearly, so it is easier to understand. On the other hand, poem "Meeting At Night" tells about love experience in secret manner. The background of the two poems above are different. Poem "A Red, Red Rose" has a background of beautiful experience of love. Every people needs to know that someone feel happy and satisfied with their love, because in that poem the essence of love of the speaker is deep to a girl. Furthermore, the poem "Meeting At Night" has a background of secret manner love. They promise to each of having loyalty for life-long love that makes them do these relationship in happiness. The similarities of two poems are in the use of symbol that is color. The differences of two poems are "A Red, Red Rose" by Robert Burns uses many object of symbols and poem "Meeting At Night" by Robert Browning uses many symbols of nature.

Finally, the writer hopes this analysis will widely open to reader of Widya Mandala University Madiun and it can be used as a reference.
