

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Literature exists as a part of human life. It consists of some events that happen in the real life and are written in a specific way. It also gives some entertainment to the readers, therefore they like to read it. The literary works are drama, novel, and poetry. By reading the literary works, the readers can feel the sexual and the basic emotional struggle caught for survive from life in the industrial modern and the modern era. Here, the thesis writer discussess the novel entitled Sons and Lovers written by David Herbert Lawrence. The discussion on the thesis deals with ideas of life, care and problems of Walter Morel as the character of the novel, Sons and Lovers.

To make the analysis of the novel, Sons and Lovers written by D.H. Lawrence run well, the thesis writer analyzes the problem based on the theoretical framework by using the theories such as : Character, sociology, social conflict and setting. Accordingly, the three problems discussess in this thesis; first, the character of Walter Morel in Sons and Lovers is depicted as a man, who loves drinking alcohol and he almost spends all of his wage to buy such a drink. Walter Morel likes to spend his time drinking alcohol better than to keep in touch with his family. Walter Morel is known as an uneducated person and a brutal one.

Second, the thesis writer discusses about the cause of Walter Morel becoming an industrial victim. In the time of Walter Morel's life, an Industrial revolution happens in England. The industrial revolution affects many changes in social and economic structure. To support the lives, many people have to work in industries, especially children. This also happens to Walter Morel. Walter Morel never gets a formal education because he has to work since he is ten years old. His life becomes disorganized and easy to accept bad influences such as drinking alcohol.

Third, the thesis writer discusses about the effects of Walter Morel's behavior to his family. Walter Morel does not give the best care to his wife, Gertrude Morel, his first son, William Morel and his second son, Paul Morel. Walter Morel is a man who has a very bad attitude or manner for his family.

Finally, from the analysis, literary work such as the novel entitled Sons and Lovers written by D. H. Lawrence tells the readers about the portrait of a family's real life. And, it can happen to every family. Therefore, the thesis writer hopes that the readers can get some lessons from the portrait of Walter Morel's character to avoid badness and to follow the goodness to face a glorious future.
