CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

The purpose of this study is to (1) describe the dream of Joe Keller, (2) analyze the attitude and action of Joe Keller's in making his dream come true, and (3) elaborate the result of the dream. The data are collected by library research and Internet. The data corpus in drama entitled All My Sons consist of words, phrases, clauses and dialogs in All My Sons that have relationship with the problem. These data are analyzed deductively based on the philosophical approach.

Joe Keller's dream is to reach happiness. For him happiness is experiencing something beautiful and amazing; and something, which is beautiful and amazing, is making the family happy and prosperous. Money and wealth are not the dream of Joe Keller, but they are the instrument for him to obtain his dream or his happiness.

In making his dream come true, he takes some attitudes and actions. Attitudes and actions taking by Joe Keller in making the dream come true are egalitarian, optimistic, ambitious, and pragmatic. As egalitarian, Joe Keller wants to get the equal opportunity on his life. He wants to get the equal of the material possession on his life. He feels that it is necessary to get this opportunity from other members of the family. Egalitarianism is a moral principle, which believes that all people should be equal. He believes that he has equal opportunity to do anything to make him rich. Accordingly, he produces the parts of aeroplane during the war.

Joe Keller is optimistic that he can obtain his dream of happiness and prosperity. He is optimistic that he can change the economic problem of his family and makes the business runs well by the helping of his son, Chris. Joe Keller is not a type of a pessimistic; he never stops to fight the struggle of his life and his family. He knows that it is not easy to obtain the dream, but he is optimistic and has high self-confidence that he can make his dream come true.

Joe Keller as the head of the family has big responsible to take care of his family and makes them happy. As a man with big responsibility, he is a type of ambitious man. He is obsessed by his ambition to make his family happy and prosperous. As an ambitious man, Keller has big ambition in developing the business.

Joe Keller is also a pragmatic. He takes the practical way to obtain his dream in order to make his family happy and prosperous. As a pragmatic, Joe Keller focuses his action on the practical way to obtain his dream. He only cares how to make his dream come true. As a pragmatist, Joe Keller can do anything to make his dream come true. Keller believes that those aspects will support him in obtaining his dream.

Joe Keller's has both positive and negative effects. From the positive effects, there are two positive effects. The first effect is that Joe Keller is not a dreamer. He is driven by his dream to have necessary attitude and actions. His attitudes to be egalitarian, optimistic, ambitious and pragmatic person follow his dream. The second positive effect is that Keller is successful to obtain his part of dream that is making his family prosperous by giving them much money.

From the negative effects, Keller gets bad treatment from his family. Besides, he also lost the trust from his wife and his son. Keller cannot endure all of his burdens. And as the result of his action, Keller decides to shoot himself. He does suicide to account for his action and makes his family happy. Because of his love toward his family, he can do anything to make them happy, including sacrifice himself for the family.
