

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

Moral is an action of person which is considered right or good. In contrast, immoral refers to an action of person which is considered wrong or bad. Value is an ethical principles to which people feel a strong emotional commitment and which they in judging behaviour. What we value in the realm of human conducts are called moral values.

The library research and deductive method are applied in this study. The library research is applied to find the related theories of moral values and behaviour. It is used to find the data. The data are all of the words, phrases, and clauses that deal with moral value. While, the deductive method is applied to get spesific cases started from general cases.

A person has moral values and behaviour that relate with the society. The moral values are believed by people such as truth, loyalty, love and so on. The moral values of Kitty deal with her betrayal. Her marriage with Walter is failed. She makes an affair with Charles. She does it because she feels frustration in her marriage.

Walter is bored and self-conscious man. He always busies with himself and his work without caring Kitty. So, there is no communication and sexual intercourse between them. While, Kitty wants to fulfil her desire. Then, her desire is complied by other man, Charles. She gets happiness from him. Kitty's affair has hurt Walter.

Walter is angry very much to her. However, he does not do anything because he loves her so much.

Kitty's moral values are deplorable manner because of her betrayal. She does affair to achieve her desire, but she ignores Walter's feeling. She also ignores her dignity as a wife. On the other hand, she also has goodness moral values in her manner. She tries to restrain to Walter's condition. She does not want to leave him when she has an affair with Charles.

The marriage does not complete when there is no passion anymore between husband and wife. A person will achieve his desire to other people if he cannot obtain it in his marriage. In this case, the desire of Kitty cannot be blame, but she cannot betray Walter. She should not do adultery to him, because she still becomes a wife of Walter. Otherwise, a couple has to discuss about their problem in their marriage. If there is no the best way to solve the problems, so a wife can ask for her husband the divorce. When the divorce is not given by a husband to a wife, hence the marriage will be betrayed by one of the couple.
